

10 ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

 A twist drill for use, predominantly by non-professional do-it-yourself workers incorporates a flute architecture with an internal ridge for promoting the break up of chips into short length components. The tip of the twist drill includes an axial relief construction for improved performance across a wide variety of 5 materials, and a highly sloped face for prompting transport of chips away from the drill tip.